What about the indiscriminate Sunday shooting that is going on round the town? We are asked if this isn't a breach of the Sunday ordinance and must confess it is. Shooting out in the country on Sunday may be all right if you are not caught at it, but in town and outside your door it is a different thing, and a thing that should be put a stop to at once. We noted yesterday quite a number of youngsters going about with guns in their hands blazing away at anything in the shape of a bird they saw. Where's our constable, gentle shepherd tell us where?

THE CHOLERA SCARE.

And the bug bear of Europe is abroad again; and the timid are more timid, and the nervous more nervous, and those who have any ailment at all work themselves up till they are sure they have it. Women the cholera, which by all accounts has broken out afresh across the water paying its periodical visitation as it were and catching up in its horrible maw a few hundred, or a few more thousand victims. The present menace to the health of our people from this insidious Asiatic plague, recalls to our mind last year's cholera scare and the horrible scenes that were enacted in various parts of Russia and Germany. In many places respect for the dead was done away with, a false notion prevailing that by feasting and forgetting, dancing and merry making, they could escape the disease. Dead bodies would be laid upon the door steps, and those who bore them away would hear the sound of revelry inside. The general motto was "eat drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die." Yes! self preservation was the thought of one and all. Family ties were as nothing, to be sick was to be forsaken. The hospitals were full, and many sank to their death without a friend or even a witness. Among the lowest and most hardened of the people, a greed of gain took possession of those who escaped the dread disease; and many an attempt at pillage and general looting was made. It was right that the rascals should live. "Long live the pestilence and death to the wealthy," was a ghastly toast given by one who steadied his feet against a dead body and took a long pull at a flask of liquor. It was the same at the time when the terrible scourge took place in India, when thousands died in a day. The English troops stationed there were wild with terror at the first onslaught of the enemy they were powerless to fight, but later on became hardened to all thoughts of fear, and indulged in revelry and song even when their comrades were being borne from their sight stricken with the terrible foe. That those scenes will be perpetuated again to such a degree it is not likely, for the result of the last Asiatic epidemic was to cause authorities the world over, to overhaul most thoroughly the sanitary conditions of their respective cities, wherein the chief danger of the disease lies, as well as to cause the United States to take most stringent measures as to the examination of all steerage passengers coming to her shores. To us here in the Northwest there is little or no danger at all; but if a case does reach us, it will be because it is brought to us by some undesirable stranger or strangers passed through from Halifax, or some American port. The chief thing is not to get frightened. At the last scare in New York, hundreds of people worried themselves into down right illness, and into that frame of mind that they were just ready to take the enemy when it did come their way.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

According to the latest intelligence from London, France has not yet done bullying Siam; Germany is watching Russia; and Italy and France have a dispute on over the killing of some Italian working men. This isn't particularly reassuring for the peace of Europe, and it is not too much to say that take it all round the friendly relations between some of the great powers are severely strained. That the late alliance between France and Russia accounts for the position taken by the former both in regard to Siam and Egyptian matters cannot be doubted. That the alliance is not solely intended for defensive purpose is equally demonstrated by a variety of circumstances. Each of these two great powers has an enormous standing army. France can readily mobilize at short notice a million of armed, trained and disciplined men, while Russia has as many more, waiting only the word of the Czar to throw themselves across the German border. A great standing army must be employed, long inactively makes it dangerous. The officers of the Russian military establishment have long been clamoring for active service.

France has her ancient enemy on the left bank of the Rhine to make a settlement with, she has Alsace and Lorraine to recover and the bitterness of humiliations to avenge. Russia never forgets her purpose to extend her domains to the Bosphorus. A war with Germany would at once unite the French people and cause them to forget their domestic troubles. A conflict involving all Europe might result in the accomplishment of Russia's designs upon Turkey. At a recent address delivered at Berlin, Prince Bismarck is credited with saying, that the days had gone by when France regarded a campaign in Germany as a sort of pleasure excursion still it behooved them to be prepared. The success of the German army bill, the reform in the equipment and arming of the French infantry, and a dozen other things are signs of the times—signs that point to great protective measures—or preparations for the aggressive.

But perhaps after all, the great factor in the peace of Europe is grim Russia herself, on whom Great Britain has at all times got her eye. With her vessels shut up there in the Baltic she is still an enemy to be feared. Little aid can be obtained of the vast military resources of Russia from a cursory glance, but when it is remembered that France commands the largest number of trained soldiers in Europe and that Russia comes next with nearly two millions and a half, disciplined, and inured to all manner of hardships and eager for the fray, some adequate conception of the meaning of a general European war may be obtained, for evolution is not, nor ever has been the process of Russia's development. The nation like the climate is one of extremes, and in revolution, shocks and bloodshed, whether for good or bad will alone advance to its destiny. And what that destiny will be—who knows. The triple alliance is but a straw in the way of war. The soldiers of Austro-Hungary hate Germany and their German allies. Italy and Austria are also distrustful of each other—and the overtaxed people of the three countries, still heavier taxed to support the burdens imposed upon them by the maintenance of the triple alliance, view with dissatisfaction the peace maintained at such a price. They feel and understand the necessity of the re adjustment of affairs, but the particular form this inevitable re adjustment will take the wisest of the political soothsayers is unable to determine.

Let it come, and the sooner the better say a great many. There will be a market for Canadian product then, and the farmers all round will have a jubilee of a time.

Further discouraging news concerning the Peary expedition comes from Labrador. According to the last report Peary was at Davis inlet on August 2nd, and on the 5th, had reached Nain. There he tried again to purchase dogs, but failed. He offered the Esquimaux forty cents each for dogs, but as they are worth four or five dollars each the Esquimaux would not sell. So Peary left for Okkak, the next Moravian settlement. As he would not pay greater prices there he could get no dogs. Then he announced his intention of going to Hebron, Ramah and other settlements further north, making every effort to secure dogs at those places and if unsuccessful, would depend upon getting dogs at Drisco, Greenland, as a last resort. Dogs are now doubly necessary to Peary, as those he had all perished before Nain was reached, and consequently it is impossible for the expedition to accomplish anything without a far greater number of dogs than at first was considered necessary. The steamer has been delayed a month behind her regular time, making it problematical if she reaches her destination at all and it is almost certain that she will be frozen up before the cargo of supplies are unloaded.

At a Unionist meeting held at Otley, in the West Riding of Yorkshire the Duke of Devonshire said that he would shortly be obliged to ask the House of Lords to reject the Home Rule Bill. He would advance three reasons for throwing out the bill. The first of these was that the measure was exceedingly bad in its principles and in its details. The second was that the bill had not undergone the discussion which its importance demanded and the third was that it was not known whether the principle and details involved would commend themselves to the electors. The duke added that the House of Lords must refuse to pass the bill until it had been remitted to the calm and deliberate opinion of the nation.

NEIGHBORLY.
(from the journal of a Bohemian)
Trump on him and kick him, he's down in the dust.
But then we all know he was going to "bust."
He's a rogue and a sharper, a man without means,
Who perhaps has to feed on a ration of beans.
How wrong it would be, if the world was content,
To let a man live when he hasn't a cent.

"Did you see him John dear? what an impatient toad.
Why he bowed to me when he crossed over the road.
And his hat and his boots were as shabby as I am sure.
As the tapestry mat in front of his door.
It is dreadful to think that the world is content.
To let a man live when he hasn't a cent."

It's a crime and a sin to be poor,—better die.
If you live they will say that your life is a lie.
They will envy the breath that to you has been given.
And then pray to God that you won't go to heaven.
For why? tell me why should the world be content.
To let a man when he hasn't a cent?

The world yes! the world, so your neighbors will say.
Is meant for the man who is able to pay.
And the man without cash, is a sort of machine.
For all that is wicked and hellish and mean.
How bad it would be, if the world was content.
To let a man live when he hadn't a cent.

NORTH WEST ASSEMBLY.

REGINA, August 25.

Resolution No. 3 asked that the privilege of taking a second homestead be granted to all homesteaders who had fulfilled the conditions of homestead entry before June 2nd, 1892. The reply is to the effect that the present settlement of the homestead question is final, and that it was arrived at with the full consent of the parliamentary representatives of the Northwest. This, of course, is a knock down argument, and shows that however inefficient our representatives may be in serving our interests, they can upon occasion be made to serve the designs of the government very effectively.

The fourth resolution is addressed to the C. P. R., and asks for a reduction of export rates on grain, and internal rates on coal. The reply is lengthy and is from Mr. Van Horne. He quotes rates to show that grain hauled from distant points in the Territories at a loss, and states that the limited profit on the shorter hauls from more easterly points will not admit of substantial reduction. He suggests to note that as long as he gets a fair profit on his haul to eastern points where the bulk of the grain is shipped, it makes little matter whether he gets full rate or half rate on the comparatively small amount shipped from Saskatchewan and Alberta points. He also suggests to consider that Edmonton, the point most highly favored as to rates to Montreal, to which point it does not need or wish to ship grain, is charged exactly the same rate to Vancouver and nearly one-fourth of the distance—which offers the best market for its produce. The rates per hundred pounds on wheat to Montreal are given as follows:—Winnipeg 40, Brandon 47, Regina 50, Calgary 55, Prince Albert 57, Edmonton 58. His argument regarding internal coal rates is convincing. It does not pay, it appears, to haul coal to Winnipeg from the western mines at the present rates. If the rate to Winnipeg were raised in order that the rate to Regina might be lowered, sales in Winnipeg would cease, and on account of the decrease in the demand the mines would be shut down and the central parts of the Territories would not be able to get northwest coal at all. With all due deference to Mr. Van Horne, it does seem strange that the obstacles to hauling coal from say Lethbridge at low rates do not seem to exist in regard to its being hauled from Pennsylvania at much lower rates.

The last resolutions calls the attention of the government to the great wrong being done school districts and municipalities throughout the Territories by permitting certain land and railway companies not exempt from taxation by law, to hold their land by such tenure that they are not available for taxation. Chief amongst these companies are the Great Northwest Land Company, the Manitoba, Northwestern Railway Company, the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake & Saskatchewan Railway Company, the Calgary & Edmonton Railway Company. The system under which taxation is evaded is somewhat as follows:—An understanding is arrived at between the government and the company as to what lands shall belong to the company, but no deed of the lands is guaranteed until the company makes a sale to a third party, when an agreement is issued and the property becomes taxable.

The reply to the resolution is that the matter has been handed to the C. P. R. company for their consideration. Why it is not stated, nor does it appear unless on the long unquoted theory that the C. P. R. is the government.

Bill filed from the committee on agriculture respecting various weeds.

Clayton from the standing orders committee reporting the petition for the incorporation of the city of Calgary.

Haultain asked if at the meeting of the standing orders committee on which the petition had been considered completed. Clayton replied that as the petition was a formal function and all the formalities had been complied with including the payment of the fee he did not think it necessary to call a meeting of the committee to consider the petition. If any member of the committee objected he would hold over the report. Haultain requested that the report be held over.

Cayley from the special committee reported the draft reply filed of the lieutenant governor speech.

Tweed gave notice of special committee of enquiry and agricultural returns of territories.

Insinger gave notice of one and Haultain of two bills to amend.

Jelly asked for a return giving the names of all persons employed by the lieutenant governor in council their duties and salaries the number of hours each day they are employed and the total number of days the government offices were kept open during the year ending 31st June 1893. His object was to find out upon what principle the employees of the government were run.

The healthy condition of Canadian commerce is attracting considerable attention in Great Britain. Frequent references are being made to the prosperity of the Dominion as compared with the position of affairs in the United States and Australia. At a luncheon in London a few days ago attended by a number of prominent people, a tribute was paid to the strong position of Canada, and special reference was made to the soundness of the Canadian banks.

Edward Holmes the tramping journalist reached Vancouver Tuesday last, completing his long tramp across the continent. He was 117 days on the passage, twenty-seven of which he did not walk. His average time was thirty-two miles per day, the biggest distance covered in twenty-four hours was fifty-two miles. Holmes is the first man to cross the continent by the Canadian route. Holmes has accomplished several big walks. He was first to cross Central America through the bush. He also footed it across both islands of Japan and travelled through a great part of Sam. His last day's tramp was from Warnock to Vancouver, forty miles. He started at 7 o'clock a. m., completing the distance in ten hours. His 5,000 mile tramp has decreased his weight and he feels better in health than when he started from Montreal on May 2nd last.

A destructive fire occurred at Regina on Friday last, starting in a shed containing a few barrels of coal oil, at the rear of McCusker's blacksmith shop. Coal oil has been stored for two or three years back in this place, although there is a by-law to the effect that no coal oil shall be stored within the limits of the town. It was owned by the Standard Oil company. A stable owned by William Longworthy took fire next, then one owned by P. Lamont, and one owned by Mrs. J. W. Young, all of which were burned down. Mrs. J. W. Young also lost a house valued at about $350. Fortunately it was a calm day; had the wind been blowing either east or west nothing could have saved half the town from going, as the fire engine has been out of repair for nearly a year. The fire brigade did good service with the chemical engine. The loss altogether is between $1,500 and $2,000 with no insurance.

THE WHEEL OF LIFE.

A few days ago there passed away in Louisville, Kentucky one of the old time gamblers of the South, Anderson M. Waddell, the King of sports of whom many an anecdote good and bad has appeared in print. There is however one that has not told before. Four years ago, one miserable wet night we supped with a friend at an oyster restaurant off Chestnut street. It was after the theatres had closed, and as we stepped into the street to go our hotel the clocks rang out the hour of twelve. We had gone about a block when our attention was attracted by two gentlemen in light overcoats, who stood talking in an adjacent doorway. One was tall and the other was short. The short one was evidently a little under the weather, the tall one was not. As we were passing they were approached by a girl with a basket of flowers, who with a tattered shawl throw over her head and bare feet, pressed them to buy a button hole. "Get out of this you little beggar," said the short one savagely when she still persisted, and clutching her by the shoulder he gave her a twist which sent her sprawling into the roadway, looked and all. With a sob and a moan, leaving half of her roses behind in the mud, the wail of the streets moved on, but she had not gone further than the next corner, when the tall stranger had overtaken her. "Here child!" he asked—"you are not hurt are you? Here's something to pay for the flowers you lost," and he slipped a handful of greenbacks in the little dirt stained hand held timidly out to him. The bills were ten dollar ones, and the man was Anderson M. Waddell.

And the season of shooting is here, and the smell of powder and shot, and the feathers of slaughtered ducks float around in the air. Now is the time each valiant sport breaks the record and does wonderful things—when he returns to town, in the killing line. "By jove old man, slipped over in one shot, positively mad, if I didn't. Awfully fine shooting you know," and soon. We mind two, who shall be nameless that started out on a recent Saturday afternoon on an expedition of this kind, equipped with the latest 12 gauge breach loaders, and weighted down with a hundred shells each, more or less. They took two game bags, and by way of precaution, just before starting slipped a gunny sack into the buggy also. Visions of roast duck on the morrow and green peas were before them—a plenteous of ducks, for we heard them say in tones of commiseration to some half a dozen different friends, "all right old fellow, sorry you can't come too, never mind we'll give you half a dozen or so when we come back." Yes! they had been shooting before and knew that all they had got to do was to put their guns to their shoulders and bang bang away while the dear obliging little ducks waited for them. Somewhere around 3 o'clock in the afternoon they reached the place of battle, hitched their fiery untamed to a tree, and started off dandy a slough. It was hot and they were thirsty, but they didn't mind that. Occasionally they got into the slough without meaning to, but they didn't mind that either—they were out after fame and glory, and trifles couldn't bother them. So they tramped and tramped and tramped, dear me what a beastly hot day it was and how confoundedly thick the bushes were, and how scarce the ducks seemed. At 4 o'clock they hadn't set eyes on one. At 5 p. m. without a word of warning two flew up under their very nose, but were evident in a hurry and headed south. The recording angel hints that on this occasion one of them was so startled he dropped his gun, the other fired off both barrels but only blew a limb from a tree. At 6 o'clock their spirits were revived by the knocking over of lame one that had evidently been wounded before. Both fired together—so both claim it, this caused a coolness between them, that hasn't been rectified yet. At six-thirty they observed floating calmly on the surface of the waters bunches of more. By doing a little stalking they were able to get near enough to shoot. At the first fire they knocked over two. How tame they were, the others didn't offer to fly. They fired again and again, then drew lots to see who should wade out and get them, but when the man with the new gun got there, oh horror of horrors—he found they were only decoys. At 8:30 they both swore duck shooting was a farce, that there wasn't any game in the d—d country, and closed their bag with two attenuated specimens of the goosing tribe, that wouldn't pass when plucked for undersized quail.

That truth is stranger than fiction the newspapers and police courts of the world prove every day. Now we read of a man marrying his own sister and not finding it out for 2 years, while less than six months ago a gentleman in London became betrothed to his own daughter and only discovered her identity on the eve of leading her to the altar. From the columns of a contemporary we get the details of a nice little comedy enacted in a certain street in a certain boarding house at Toronto. The dramatic persona were a bachelor book keeper, elderly but well preserved, a widow, evidently a very fascinating "widow" on the right side of 30, and a young gallant, exceedingly successful as a lady killer. Not more than 12 months ago the said widow's husband—her senior by quite a bit, kicked the bucket so to speak and departed to a better or a worse place, leaving his pretty young wife to face the world alone, with nothing to help her to bear it, save his memory—his photograph and a snug little fortune securely invested in irreproachable real estate. For a time of course Mrs. Brown the widow, was as all widows should be, inconsolable, and enveloped in deep mourning looked on the world and all in it with watery mournful eyes. This could not last forever though—the first stage of widowhood—six months we believe, rolled rapidly away, the black dress was exchanged for the grey, and in time the grey for the blue. At this stage of her sorrows, so the story goes, she took up her quarters at a fashionable boarding house, where her presence, owing to her good looks and the snug little bit of money she had created quite a stir among both sexes. With the gentlemen of course Mrs. Brown was at once a great success, and on all sides a desperate effort was made by the gallants to capture her. For a time it was an even field and no favors, but soon Mr. Johnson, the book keeper made the running and became the acknowledged future husband of the charming Mrs. B. All went well for a time, Johnson began to pat himself on the back and already count the dollars, when lo there appeared on the scene, another squire, with a blood royal name, a moustache that defies description and an athlete's figure. In a few words, the book keeper was supplanted and the new comer reigned in his stead. Now the latest arrival was no green horn at love making, he went in for the widow as he said for the fun of the thing, but as for being snitten with her he wasn't. This respected Johnson soon found out and having in view the golden apple he had lost, he determined to approach his fortunate rival. Would the gentleman give the lady up? No! he wouldn't unless for a consideration, so says our authority.

"Say $1000 then on the day I marry her," said the book keeper who was a man of business.

"Make it two."

"Couldn't do it. Split the difference and say $1,500."

Agreed, and the two shook hands like old friends. A week ago at a suburban town the elderly book keeper married the widow, and a few days later the young man with the fine moustache cashed a cheque for $1,500 at the bank where the widow keeps her account—And such is life.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS.

All even numbered sections excepting 5 and 26 are open for homestead entry (160 acres) by any person sole head of a family, or any male over the age of 18 years.

ENTRY.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated or if the homesteader desires he may, on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, or the Commissioner of Dominion Lands, Winnipeg, receive authority for some one to be named by the intending settler near the local office to make the entry for him. Entry fee $10, or if cancelled land $20.

DUTIES.

Under the present law homestead duties may be performed in three ways, to be decided on making entry:

1. Three years' cultivation and residence, during which period the settler must not be absent for more than six months in any one year without forfeiting the entry.

2. Residence for three years within two miles of the homestead and actual residence for 3 months in a habitable house next prior to application for patent. Ten acres must be broken the first year after entry, 15 acres additional in the second and 15 in the third year; 10 acres to be in crop the second year, and 25 acres the third year.

3. A settler may reside anywhere for the first two years, in the first year breaking 5 acres, in the second cropping said and breaking additional 10, also building a habitable house. The entry is forfeited if residence is not commenced at the expiration of 2 years from date of entry. Thereafter the settler must reside upon and cultivate his homestead for at least six months in each year for three years.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT may be made before the local agent, or any homestead inspector.

Six Months' Notice Must be Given in Writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands by a Settler of his Intention Prior to Making Application for Patent. PRE-EMPTIONS are by law abolished, and may not be entered for after 1st January, 1890.

A Second Homestead may be taken by anyone who has performed the duties to entitle him to a certificate of recommendation for the first homestead on or prior to the second day of June, 1890.

All communications having reference to lands under control of the Dominion Government, lying between the eastern boundary of Manitoba and the Pacific Coast should be addressed to:

H. H. SMITH, Commissioner of Dominion Lands, Winnipeg.
